Primary education became compulsory from nineteenth century, children became an important category of readers. Production of school textbooks became critical for publishing industry. A children's press, devoted to literature alone, was setup in France in 1857. The press published new works as well as old fairy tales and folk tales. The Grimm Brothers in Germany spent years compiling traditional folk tales gathered from peasants. What they collected was edited before the stories were published in collection in 1812. Anything that was considered unsuitable for children or would appear vulgar to the elites, was not included in the published version. Rural folk tales thus acquired a new form. In this way, print recorded old tales but also changed them.
