(Passage Based Questions)

12. Read the following passage and answer the questions that follow:

In the seventeenth century, the European traders reached North America and relieved to find the native peoples friendly and welcoming. Unlike the Spanish in South America, who were overcome by the abundance of gold in the country, these adventurers came to trade in fish and furs.

Further South, along the Mississippi river, the French found that the natives held regular gatherings to exchange handicrafts unique to a tribe or food items not available in other regions. In exchange for local products, the Europeans gave the natives blankets, iron vessels, gun to kill animals, and alcohol. The last item was unknown to the natives, and they became addicted to it which suited the Europeans, because it enabled them to dictate terms of Trade. <https://www.jkboseonline.com>
